LAC, Protected and other Vulnerable Students

We have a number of students at college who have had adverse childhood experiences which may have resulted in Social Services intervention, CAMHS support and other services being involved. The college prides itself on socially mobilising these students and giving them the support needed for them to succeed. Extra support is offered through the work the Progress Mentor does on an individual basis, which includes both academic support and planning, as well as raising aspirations for students by organising trips to careers fairs and courses through organisations like Tomorrow’s Women. As well as this, students can access out of class support with an LSA in the Learning Assistance Base (LAB).

Students who have Looked After Child status are monitored closely, reviewing their personal education plan (PEP) looking at progress made in college and further support we can offer to help them to achieve the grades they need to pursue their ambitions in university. This can include extra support outside of class and intervention from the progress mentor. This cohort of students can also take advantage of schemes offered by some universities specifically for raising aspirations of LAC and care-leavers.
